The earlier 89-91.5 (non-I/C) wax motor type KSB holds the valve open when cold. When the engine is started the valve is already open, increasing timing. As the engine warms the pellets melt and the valve closes. This type requires 12v to close and function correctly. Without 12v power, the KSB will remain on, which can be hard on the pump.

With the ignition "ON", and the engine "OFF", there should be a steady reference voltage of around 5 Volts, and a good ground. The third wire in the connector is the MAP sensor signal wire leading to the PCM. Use an appropriate wiring diagram for the application to determine the correct color-coding for the wires in the connector.
